

Training of Stakeholders in Restorative Approaches and Practices

Since 2016, staff and consultants with Enfold have been trained on restorative justice processes by international experts.<sup>1</sup>

We organize and conducted following training workshops in restorative approaches and practices for stakeholders:

Restorative Justice and Community Building Circle Process

Target audience: Individuals and organizations interested in learning about restorative justice, and how to conduct Restorative Community Building Circles with children and adults in different settings.

The training covers an introduction to the concept of Restorative Justice and how it differs from punitive justice system, the principles of Restorative Practices, elements of a Circle process, experience of community building Circle process, and conducting mini circles.

Restorative Justice Approaches in Education: facilitating Life Skills through Restorative Circles

Target Audience: Teachers, counsellors and facilitators working with children and adolescents.

The workshop focuses on the concept of Restorative Justice and Circle process, understanding the role of restorative practices in school settings, and experiencing facilitation of life skills through Restorative Circle process.

Restorative Justice Approaches in Education: facilitating sexuality and personal safety education through Restorative Circles

Target Audience: Teachers, counsellors and facilitators, community workers engaging with children and adolescents.

The workshop focuses on the concept of Restorative Justice and Circle process, understanding the role of restorative practices when working with children and adolescents, and experiencing facilitation of sexuality and personal safety education through Restorative Circle process. The training also includes inputs on the sexual and reproductive systems.

---

<sup>1</sup> Staff and consultants at Enfold have been trained by Sujatha Baliga, Impact Justice USA on circle process and harm circles; by Terry O'Connell, Real Justice, Australia on Restorative Justice Conferencing; and by Sonya Shah, Ahimsa Collective, the USA on circle processes.

Restorative Approaches and Practices in CCIs

Target audience: Organizations and individuals using or planning to use RJ based circle process with children, families and stakeholders in Observation Home, Special Home, and Children's Homes in the Indian context.

Training covers the meaning of "restorative justice" and how it differs from punitive penal system; introduction to different types of restorative circles, experience of community building circle, sharing of experience of facilitating restorative processes in Child Care Institutions, the learnings and insights that emerged, feasibility, challenges and concerns.

To organize these trainings or to learn more about restorative practices, please contact info@enfoldindia.org